tain uses, are two of the most powerful agencies for commanding markets, but a monopoly based upon these qualities is possessed by few of the staple products of the United States. And when it is wanting all the push and ingenuity of merchants seem to fail.

Besides that, positive blunders are made through ignorance or thoughtlessness. For example, a cargo of American machine-made shoes was sent to one of North African countries, where a shoe of North African countries, where a shoe of a peculiar shape, flexible sole and made of undressed leather was the only foot-lay aside their sandals, costing but a few pennies to make, and take up the better, because far more durable, American shoe. The power of fashion, habit and prejudice never seems to enter into the calculations of the American exporter. Possessed of common sense himself, he

Sewers Running Up Hill. Harry Birkinbine, of the waterworks company, is so experienced an engineer that his opinions of the much discussed sewerage are worthy of consideration. He was asked yesterday by a BEE man what he thought about the talk there was concerning sewers being running up hill, and being imperfectly constructed,

"I've heard a good deal about the sewers not being right, and that in some places they made them run up hill. The trouble is that nobody can build sewers in this soil, the way they are built, and have them do good service for any length of time; a brick sewer laid on this soil ought to rest on plank to keep it from settling. I don't care how good the bricks are. You cannot help getting in some through which water will filter. After a little, wherever the sewerage filters through these brick into the soil, there will be a settling, and soon you have your sewer curving up and down like a snake. Then the sewer doesn't carry off, gets stopped up, and folks begin talking about the sewer having been built crookedly and about trying to make water run up hill and all that.

"You think, then, that planks should be laid and the sewer rest upon these." "Yes, with all brick sewers in this soil. Then, too, I think that instead of build-ing the sewers round they should be eggshaped, the small end down. If you stop to think a minute, you will see that this sort of a sewer will clean itself easier. It gives the narrowest space at the bottom, so that if there is any water running through the sewer it will have flow enough to clean out the sediment. I should lay the plank first, then build up the sewer, so as to leave an egg-shaped channel, and then throw a simple arch over the top. Then I would have the connections made near the top. As it is now the connections are being made right into the side, about the center. If a sewer gets over half full, the dirt and sediment of all sorts washes into these connections, and stops them up. There is danger of backwater, too, running into these connections. If they were put in at the top or near it, there would not be these difficulties."

Struggling For a Prisoner.

Two men at work near the river got into some sort of an altercation which ended in one of them, Ira Jones, shooting at the other, John Shipcow. The latter had an information filed in Justice Schurz's court charging Jones with assault with intent to kill. Deputy Marshal White drove down to the river yesterday to get Jones. He found his man. but Jones wanted to get his shoes, which were in a boat near by. The officer accommodated him and Jones, getting into the boat, proceeded to push from the shore, intending doubtless to make good his escape to the Nebraska side. White is an emergency man, and in an instant he was in the water and after the boat. He made Jones come back to Iowa, and on landing Mrs. Jones came to the rescue of her beloved husband. She waged war on the officer with a piece of fence board, until the officer pulled his billy, which was soon knocked out of his hand in the struggle. She got possession of this, and before White could rally had hit him over the head twice with it. As the others were taking an occasional hand in, too, he pulled his revolver and read the riot act. The crowd quieted down and he took his man in his buggy and brought him up town. Jones claims that he did not aim at Shipcrow, but that he fired his revolver in the air just to frighten him.

A few months ago there appeared in this city a stirring young man, apparently a Jew, who busied himself in introducing a new carpet cleaning process, securing considerable patronage, and giving fair satisfaction to his customers. A short time ago he bought an interest in the Council Bluffs laundry, with Amos Burg, buying out Burg's partner for $300, paying only $25 down, and the bal-ance in promises. He was to have some money from the old country by the 1st of August, and would then settle for the rest. In the meantime he drew from the receipts of the business enough to pay his board and meet his personal expenses. On the 3d of this month Fisher disappeared suddenly, and having not been seen or heard from since, his partner is convinced that he has skipped out. He figures up that he is out of pocket about $150 by his relations with Fisher.

Just before Fisher disappeared there was a fire at the laundry which did considerable damage, and which was not covered by insurance. It is possible that this loss caused Fisher to decide to seek new pastures, instead of staying by and helping meet the loss with his partner.

The funeral of Freddie Hill, aged eleven years, son of F. C. Hill, of the Empkie Hardware company, was held yesterday afternoon at the family residence. There was a large gathering of sympathizing friends. Rev. Dr. Crofts officiated, and the services were tender and impressive. The words of consolation were based on the passage of scripture which speaks of the dust returning to dust, and the spirit to the God who gave it. The speaker dwelt upon the idea that nature seemed ever reaching up its arms to receive the physical remains. The dust returned to the dust. It was equally true that the arms of the loving Father were reaching out to receive the spiritual. The return of the spirit was no less certain than that of the dust. The the thoughts of the speaker were, as usual, clothed in well chosen words. The floral tributes of friends were numerous and beautiful. Among them were pillows of cut flowers, one with the words, "Our Boy." The other had upon it a pet name, "Fritz."

The Avoca Court.

The establishment of a branch district court at Avoca has caused numerous legal questions to arise. One of these is an important one. It is whether a judgment rendered in the court at Avoca is due notice to the public as a judgment entered here. Judge Carson had a case good. The clerk of the Avoca court has been following the opposite policy and holding the opposite opinion. Hereafter, under this ruling, a judgement in Avoca will not be really complete until a transcript of it is filed here.

Wednesday evening there was a happy gathering of friends at the home of Miss Mary Dansizer, on Mynster street, in Mary Dansizer, on Mynster street, in honor of the Misses Minnie Fischer, of Des Moines, Miss kate Shaw, of St. Joe, and Ray Smith, of Omaha. About 6 o'clock in the evening they repaired to the residence of Miss Maggie Hill, on Fifth avenue, giving her a happy surprise. Among the planners of this surprise party, were Misses Mary Dansizer, Louisa Williams and Mr. J. N. Cochran. The young folks danced till a late hour, and the evening closed with a season of conundrums. There were about forty couples in attendance, eight couples becouples in attendance, eight couples being from Omaha.

A Legal Race. Yesterday afternoon there was a hot race between two men, to see which could get to the county building first. One had a quit claim deed, conveying to his wife several cheap lots in the city, the consideration being "his love and affec-tion for her, and one dollar in hand paid." He was rushing for the recorder's office to get his document filed. The other man had an attachment against his property, and he was rushing for the clerk's office. The race was about two minutes in favor of the man with the attachment, and the owner of the lots will doubtless find that it has cost him $2.50 to put on record a public assurance of the love which he has for his wife.

Commercial Curiosities.

Washington C. Ford in the Epoch: There is a comic side to what is called American assurance, and nowhere is this comic side more visible than in our attempts to build up a foreign trade. Long schooled to place their trust in congress and the home market, our manufacturers have scorned to seek profit in outside markets, and, content with an artificial monopoly, they have produced until they are rudely awakened to the fact that they are in danger of being drowned in their own fat, as the home market, large as it is, has not extended so rapidly as the powers of production.

This schooling is the very worst that could be depended upon in competing in neutral markets with foreign manufac turers, and the little experience already had, shows how different the factors are in an artificial and in a neutral market. Shut in from foreign competition, the American manufacturer feared only dorecently before him which involved this point. He decided that a transcript must be made out at Avoca and sent here for record in order to make the notice and that was slow in developing; but when it did come, it must be made out at Avoca and sent here for record in order to make the notice at the notice and that was slow in developing; but when it did come, it forced him to improve his processes and utilize every cost-saving and labor-saving appliance offered. In spite of this he finds he has not advanced as much as other nations have.

Still he enters foreign markets, and his methods of entering are worthy of study. Of course there are many exceptions. The natural monopoly of a high quality of petroleum has forced open the ports of the world and it still sells eleports of the world, and it still sells al-most the world over, in spite of a rising competition that is backed by enormous
